SP-3 Customer Response

Just posted this the Bryston thread on AVForum so I thought I'd share it over the pond

Well, just been jumping from track to track trying out all my favourite demo music, now I'm going to try and be unbiased, honest, but I can honestly say I've never heard my system sound this good before.

Now this maybe due to fact that this is the first time I've tried a full Bryston system in my new house with the larger living room, but it sounds bloody awesome, it is the only way to describe it, it's been real goose bump time I'm sure my BP26 would have sounded this good but I sold it before moving, so I'll never know, one thing is for sure though, when it comes to 2ch the SP3 definitely is no compromise.

I'm getting a clarity in the mid/treble like I've never heard before, amazing separation and a real transparency, especially when it comes to vocals, they are so clean and revealing, totally captivating.

So I think it's fair to say that the SP3 has passed it's 2ch test with flying colours, and at last I've got a processor that is phenomenal with music, I'm sure it is going to blow me away when it comes to film soundtracks equally, unfortunately I've got to wait till at least the weekend to hook up multi channel, but in all honesty that isn't too bad as I've got loads of music I want to listen to in the meantime.

Right, back to it

BTW, Thank You to everyone at Bryston, I couldn't be happier
