Montreal Audio Show – April 2014

As I've mentioned before, Bryston was ubiquitous throughout the show, but also had their own showcase with their Model T Signature floorstanders and two 28BSST power amps.

The Model T sports a passive external crossover and had a huge soundstage (they are also huge, over five feet tall). I wasn't able to play my reference material because everything was streamed from their music server, but I was able to play some familiar Stevie Ray Vaughan tracks, which are a great way to test the highs of a speaker. SRV can be extremely annoying on many speakers that over-emphasize the highs, but the Model Ts shined, had really solid and tight bass, and great imaging.

Maybe not as good as the pricier speakers from Wilson and Magico, but these Bryston speakers I would love to have at home!
